GAME WARDENS MAKE ARREST

Robert Wright is Fined $70 in the Mayor's Court To-day.

HAD SEINE IN POSSESSION

State Officers Armed With Search Warrant Went to Home of John Wright This Morning — Young Man Pleads Guilty and Pays Fine — Other Arrests Probable.

For having a fish seine of unlawful dimensions, twelve feet long, four feet wide and with meshes larger than four inches—in his possession, Robert Wright, aged near 25, son of John Wright, living in Madison Township, was arrested this morning by two deputy game wardens. Later in police court he pleaded guilty and was fined $35 on each charge. He paid the fine.

The game wardens arrived here Tuesday afternoon. A complaint sent to the state game warden informing him that young Wright had a seine in his possession and was using it, caused the state official to send his deputies here.

Securing a search warrant the men went to the Wright home this morning and searched the house. The seine was found, the affidavits were filed and the young man arrested. The law provides for a fine of $20 and costs for each day an unlawful seine is kept by any one in the state.

The officers, although they had evidence that the young man had the seine for more than a month filed only two cases against him and he pleaded guilty to each and was given the maximum fine, which in all amounted to $70.

More arrests probably will follow according to a statement by John J. Bravy and Georg S. Lail, the two deputies here today. They say that they will closely watch Putnam county from now on, as they have learned that the game laws are frequently being violated. They say that anyone caught violating the laws will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

ATTEMPT JAIL DELIVERY

Man Held in the County Jail for Robbery Near Roachdale Attempt to Break Out.

OFFICERS SPOIL THEIR PLANS

Believing that an attempt was being made by Enos Bingham and Walter Anderson, now confined in the jail, to break out of that structure, Deputy Sheriff Mike Kelly took a position in the Ed Lynch furniture store this morning and watched the attempt. When it had gone far enough the officer, in company with Marshall Reeves, entered the jail the back way stole up the stairs and caught the men in the act.

They had torn off or found a piece of old water pipe, and this they had bent so as to form a crude wrench in the angle of the pipe. With this improvised tool they were trying to remove the patch put upon the grating at the time the chicken thieves saved their way to liberty some two years ago. This patch was bolted on and the heads of the bolts riveted. It is needless to say the prisoners had made no impression on the patch.

The men were removed from the north cells, however, and placed in separate cells. Their trial comes on Saturday.

TAX LEVY FOR CITY IS FIXED

Finance Committee Report Shows Taxpayers Must Pay 91c on $100.

COUNCIL MET LAST NIGHT

Ordinance Appropriating $775 to Riggs & Sherman For Work of Preparing Sewer Plans is Past and Much Unimportant Business is Transacted—Appropriation Ordinance is Referred to the Committee on Finance.

Councilmen Kreigh and Mahan were absent last night when the council roll call was read. After the reading of the minutes for the preceding regular meeting and the later special meeting by City Clerk Black, and adopted by the Clerk Black, and adoption by the was taken up.

Deloss Albin the acting city engineer, was behind the council gail for the first time. Councilman Graham, chairman of the committee appointed by Mayor Hays to arrange with Mr. Albin for his completing the engineering work on the Seminary street improvement, reported that the committee had arranged a contract with the engineer.

Mr. Albin is to receive $3.50 a day and will be allowed to hire any assistants he may need, the city to pay the assistants at the rate of twenty cents an hour for their work.

The acting engineer asked the council that the street commissioner be ordered to look after some work in connection with the improvement of Seminary street which is necessary but which is not included in the contract of Mr. Miller who is doing the improvement work. The work specially spoken of by Mr. Albin is the putting in of an extra catch basin. The council granted the request of Mr. Albin.

Alderman Graham then mentioned the fact that the specifications for the improvement of Seminary street do not call for the curbing and finishing of the curbing at the corner of Indiana street and Seminary street. Mr. Hays ordered the committee on public works to look after the matter and see that the curbing is properly fixed.

Then Mr. Graham said that he feared that some of the Seminary street residents would attempt to drain sink water into the new gutters. This matter was discussed and it was agreed that such a thing would not be permitted.

A communication from the Putnam Electric Light Company to the council announced that the day current would be started next Monday and warned the City Electrician to beware of the fact and not come in contact with the live wires while working on the city lines.

S. C. Prevo was granted permission to attach the drain pipe from the roof of his new building to the city tiling which runs down the alley at the side of the building and James Durham was granted permission to dig a drain ditch across Gillespie street.

At a motion of Councilman Ricketts the time fixed in the city ordinance for the completion of the Liberty street improvement work was changed from December 1, 1909 to June 1, 1910. A letter from Henry Ostrum, asking to allow him to place a retaining wall up next to the sidewalk on Seminary street, so as to do away with the three inch space between the sidewalk and the wall, was referred to the committee on streets and alleys. A discussion of the matter by the councilmen intimated that the request would not be granted.

Attention was called to the bad condition of the brick sidewalks along the side of the Morris Poultry house on north Jackson St. and the city clerk was ordered to notify Morris and Company to repair the walks. Street Commissioner Cutler reported that the concrete curbing at the corner of Hanna and Crown streets is badly broken and Contractor Rel-kard of Crawfordville will be ordered to fix it.

Mayor Hays spoke of the bad conditions caused by the large pile of manure at the rear of the Fire Department and asked the committee on the Fire Department to see that the trouble is remedied.

It was reported that people living on West Washington street want a fire alarm box placed on West Washington as there was none near them and the matter also was referred to the committee on Fire Department.

Several complaints that the Street Lights were not burning regularly were reported. The light at the corner of Columbia and Jefferson streets, it was said, had not burned for two weeks. Mayor Hays said he would look into the matter.

The Appropriation ordinance was then reported to the council from the Finance Committee. The ordinance appropriates the following amounts:

Lighting	$5100
Streets	6000
Fire Dept	3380
Police	2000
Printing	200
Salaries	3545
Water Works	4300

The ordinance was referred to the Board of Finance as was the following tax levy which was introduced.

Tax Levy—91 cents on the $100 and 50 cents poll tax. Male and spayed female dog, $1 and female dog $3.

ELECTRIC LINE GETS FRANCHISE

Vigo Traction Co. has Rights in Clay County to the Line.

IS THE FAUVRE COMPANY

County Commissioners Give New Line Right on Roads of Clay County to the Putnam Line—Are Coming to Greencastle.

The Board of Commissioners Monday afternoon granted a franchise to the Vigo Electric Company for a high tension electric line from this city to the Putnam county line.

The Vigo Electric company is the Fauvre interest of which the Brazil Electric company sought the franchise for the high tension line in order to build the service into Greencastle to furnish light and power for that city.

The Fauvre company already has about all of the material on hand and will begin construction of the high tension line at once. The franchise granted the company by the Board of Commissioners Tuesday afternoon gives them the option of building their line of poles on the Morgan Crossing road to Carbon and thence east to Putnam county line.

It has been the intention of the company to build their high tension line by way of Carbon in order to get the business of that town and it is believed that the company will decide to take this route. The franchise requires the company to make choice of which route they will use within six months and file a release of the road not to be used within that line.

Both the Fauvre and the Putnam Electric company, of which John G. Bryson of this city is manager are running a race to inaugurate a day service in Greencastle. The Putnam Electric company has a power plant at Greencastle where they also have the street lighting contract, and they are now putting in machinery to enable them to furnish a day current. The Fauvre company will push the work on the construction of their high tension line in order to get their service into Greencastle as soon as possible — The Brazil News.

PURDUE'S FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

Captain Eggeman of the Purdue football team, had the squad out for a light practice Tuesday to get the men in shape to be turned over to the Purdue coaches September 20. Coach Speik is not having any say over the men at the present time, regardless of the fact that he is here getting ready for the opening of the coaching season.

The men Tuesday under Eggeman were running over the field and having a romp in general. Just what the prospects are at present for a winning team is mere conjecture and no one can say or begin to form and opinion until the men begin to come under the direction of the coach. Their relative merits can be better judged after the hardening process is over and the men begin signals and play.

Purdue will only have eight days of actual training to get ready for its opening game with Chicago and it will require the hardest of pushing to get the men in shape for the Windy City Rivals of old gold and black. Director Nicol and Assistant Jones are confident the men will make a good showing this year. The outcome of the training season will be watched with a great deal of anxiety on the part of the admirers of Purdue. — Lafayette Journal.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed but it is probable that it will be Friday afternoon.

BIG WILL CASE FROM HENDRICKS

Seek to Break Will in $10,000 Estate of Isaiah R. Sivage.

ALLEGES UNDUE INFLUENCE

Heir at Law Brings Suit to Secure Property Alleged Given Away While Testator Was of Unsound Mind.

A case of considerable importance came to Putnam County Wednesday morning when the papers in the case of Elmer Sivage against Evan Hadley, Executor of the Estate of Isiah R. Sivage were filed here. The case is one involving the will of the late Isiah R. Sivage, which leaves the bulk of his $10,000 estate to Mary Rush and to his second and childless wife who survives him.

The complaint alleges that the only heirs are Elmer Sivage, a son, and one grand daughter, child of a daughter, deceased. The complaint alleges that the will which diverts the bulk of the estate from these heirs, was invalid for four reasons. First, because the testator was of unsound mind. Second, because undue influence was used upon him. Third, that the will is not properly executed. And finally, that the execution was procured by fraud, the testator being led to believe that the property devised was a life interest only, instead of a fee simple.

Doan and Orbison are the attorneys for the plaintiff, and the case promises to be one of unusual interest.

The Kadell & Kritchfield Company that will be here the 13-14-15 is the only large Company that is offering strictly advance vaudeville.

THE CITY NOMINATIONS.

It is not necessary in these days to place one's ear very near the ground to hear murmurs of dissatisfaction with the present administration. In fact at times the murmur rises to a roar, uttered without regard to party by both Republicans and Democrats. It takes no prophet to foretell that the people are ready for a change. But it ought not to be forgotten that in seeking this change the people will not be blind. They do not so much demand that Democrats take the place of Republicans as they demand that an able administration in the interests of all the people take the place of the present administration that has been blind and deaf to the wishes of the people. The voters will ask for a change, and prefer, evidently, a change to the Democratic party, but in making it they wish surely that the change will be for their best interests.

In a campaign there is but one basis upon which the faith of the voter may rest, and that is the personal integrity of the candidate, his freedom from control, his recorded attitude toward civic affairs. A man who has done right in the past will be apt to do right in the future, if let alone. The trouble with the present administration is an apparent desire to play politics, a yielding to ring rule, and a contempt for the wishes of the people when opposed to the wishes of the office holder. They have been czars and dictators, not the representatives of the people. The Democratic party proposes to nominate men that will command the respect of all citizens because of their personal worth, their ability and their manhood, and they propose that these men shall represent the people, being servants, not dictators doing their own will with a cold sneer for the public. It is the duty of each Democrat to make up his mind, not who is his friend but who is the best Democrat for the office, and with that in mind come to the mass meeting and vote for him. At any rate come out and help choose a man, the best man for the city. That man will be elected.

And now come the clothing manufacturers and state that our clothes will cost us, as a nation, $120,000,000 more next year than last, because of the tariff. Local shoe men state that shoes are already higher by about a dollar a dozen pair than a month ago. Great is the Republican tariff for the woolen trust and the shoe trust—but very, very hard on the consumer.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

Thoughts from men of affairs upon questions of the day.

Platform of New York Democratic Conference.

For a long time there has been talk about the conference which New York Democrats proposed to hold for the purpose of considering the party's attitude with reference to various governmental policies. The meeting has taken place. It was attended by many of the oldest Democrats of New York state, including Judge Parker. The delegates adopted the following declaration of principles:

"The Democrats assembled in conference at Saratoga Springs, Sept. 9 and 10, 1939, announce the following as their understanding of certain essential Democratic principles and policies:

"A strict construction of constitutions, both state and federal, that the rights of the state and people respectively may be preserved.

Loyal support of the federal government in the exercise of all its constitutional powers, eternal vigilance in watching and detecting and vigorous oppositions to any and all extensions of federal power that trench upon these reserved to the states or to the people.

"A tariff for revenue only; no governmental subsidies to special interests either directly or through protective tariff.

"Equal and uniform taxation, taking no more money from the people than the just needs of government economically administered require. The abandonment of our imperialistic venture in the Philippine Islands, first safeguarding their independence by sufficient guarantees.

"Steady adherence to the principle of home rule and local self-government by the state and each of its political subdivisions.

"Rigid economy in government expenditures.

"Election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people."

"Reform in our registration and enrollment laws, so that personal registration and enrollment shall be required in every political subdivision of the state.

"Reform in our methods of election, so that each elective officer shall be the separate, deliberate and intelligent selection of the voters of the state.

"Reform in our methods of nominating candidates for public office so that nominating conventions shall be composed of representatives directly chosen by the members of the party.

"Reform in our primary laws so as to give to every citizen greater direct influence in making candidates for office, and surrounding the primaries with such safeguards as will insure their honesty, and providing the necessary time and legal machinery to insure the choice of a majority of the voters being respected and enforced, in conventions and committees.

"No interference with the personal liberty of any citizen except such as is essential to secure the equal rights of all the citizens."

"Taxation of corporations by the state alone.

"A constitutional amendment authorizing the levy of a federal income tax.

"Enforcement of federal and state laws against criminal trusts and combinations in restraint of trade."

To Clean Brass Buttons and Shirt-Waist Boxes.

A cretonne covered shirtwaist box which has become soiled may be easily cleaned.

Dip a clean small scrubbing brush in very thick suds made from white soap and water, shake off as much moisture as possible and then scrub the cover.

Rub until the spots disappear. Wipe vigorously at once, until dry, with a fresh cloth. The cover will look like new when the work is done. When polishing brass buttons on a garment, it is well to protect the dress goods.

The best way to do this is to take a piece of kid glove or heavy cloth, and holding it in place, polish the button. In this way neither the polish nor the black from the button can reach the fabric.

WOULD MARRY AGAIN.
Benham: "You are my life."

Upsetting the Tables.
Jones was sitting in the hotel lobby looking over the columns of a comic weekly, when a stranger touched his arm.

"Pardon me," he apologized, pointing to a four-line joke. "Would you mind telling me just what you think of that?"

Sizing him up for a man with his first joke in print, Jones thought he would have some fun. Concentrating all the disgust in his anatomy, he spread it over his physiognomy in a nauseous expression and replied:

"No point that I can see."

"Thanks," said the stranger, with a dangerous smile of an old writer sure of his wit. "You know, I often wonder when I am writing such things how many of the readers will be able to grasp them."—New York Herald.

Post-Prandial.

Lucullus was participating in the wit at one of his famous dinners.

"I'll make you a paradox," he said.

"Hear—hear!" they cried. "Lucullus makes us a paradox."

The host quieted them with a lifted hand, and said:

"When I was a poor liver I had a good liver; but now that I am a good liver, I have a poor liver."

They all thought it over in silence a moment, and then fell to beating one another on the back in the Roman fashion.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Intellectual Age.

The women of an Indiana town recently organized a literary club and for a while everything was lovely.

"Alice," asked the husband of one of the members, upon her return home from one of the meetings, "what was the topic under discussion by the club this afternoon."

Alice couldn't remember at first. Finally, however, she exclaimed:

"Oh, yes, I recollect. We discussed the brazen-looking woman that's just moved in across the street and Long-fellow."—Harper's Weekly.

At the Opera.

"Out of sight in that gown, isn't she?" observed a gentleman in the balcony, pointing to Mrs. De Koltay, who occupied a front seat in one of the lower tiers of boxes.

"Out of sight? Well, hardly. It strikes me it is the other way about," responded his companion dryly.

Which goes to show the elasticity of the American language, which says one thing and means another. It also shows—but, upon second thoughts, we must respectfully but firmly decline going into further details.—Bohemian.

One Way Out.

Little Mary lately to say "vinegar" because she had been laughed at so often for her queer pronunciation of the word. So when her mother sent her to the store to buy some, she presented the jug to the clerk and said: "Smell of that and give me a quart."—Bohemian.

Hard Labor.

"Has a justice of the peace very extensive powers?" asked the man with the thirst for legal knowledge.

"The one I appeared before gave me a life sentence," responded Ben-heck, glancing furtively around.—Bohemian.

Next.

"The testimony doesn't hold water," said the learned judge.—Bohemian.

"Not so fast, ma. He kin copy poetry out of a book and save takin' his mind offen business."

Seems Reasonable.

"Why do so many authors who have won their spurs fail to do any further notable work?"

Best Treatment for a Burn

BOOTH AND THE LORD'S PRAYER.

This is an old story, but may be new to many readers. Whether or not it is a true story no one will venture to say. This version is found in a religious magazine of 60 years ago: Booth, the elder with several friends, had been invited to dine with an old gentleman in Baltimore of distinguished kindness, unbanity and piety. The host, though disapproving of theatres and theatre-going, had heard so much of Booth's remarkable powers, that curiosity had, in this instance overcome all his scruples and prejudices. After the entertainment was over, lamps lighted, and the company reseated in the drawing room, some one requested Booth, as a particular favor, and one which all present would doubtless appreciate, to read aloud the Lord's prayer. Booth expressed his willingness to afford them this gratification, and all eyes were turned expectantly upon him.

Booth rose slowly and reverently from his chair. It was wonderful to watch the play of emotions that convulsed his countenance. He became deathly pale, and his eyes, turned tremblingly upward, were wet with tears. As yet he had not spoken. The silence could be felt. It became absolutely painful. At last the spell was broken, as if by an electric shock, as his rich-toned voice, from his white lips syllabled forth "Our Father, who art in Heaven," etc., with a pathos and solemnity that thrilled all hearts. He finished. The silence continued. Not a voice was heard or a muscle moved in his rapt audience, until from a remote corner of the room a subdued sob was heard, and the old gentleman (their host) stepped forward with streaming eyes and tottering frame, and seized Booth by the hand.

"Sir," said he, in broken accents, "you have afforded me a pleasure for which my whole future life will feel grateful. I am an old man, and every day, from my boyhood to the present time, I thought I had repeated the Lord's prayer, but I have never heard it before, never!"

"You are right," said Booth: "to read that prayer as it should be read has cost me the severest study and labor for 30 years and I am far from yet being satisfied with my rendering of that wonderful production. Hardly one in 10,000 comprehends how much beauty, tenderness and grandeur can be condensed in a space so small, and in words so simple. The prayer of itself sufficiently illustrates the truth of the Bible, and stamps upon it the seal of divinity."

So great was the affect produced (says our informant, who was present) that conversation was sustained but a short time longer, in subdued monosyllables, and almost entirely ceased; and soon after, at an early hour, the company broke up and retired to their several homes with sad faces and full hearts.

How Some Actors Exercise.

To his life out of doors, his care in "deep breathing," and his frequent fishing trips, the late Joseph Jefferson attributed his ability to keep pace with the strain that acting imposed upon him in his later years before the public. One of his favorite remarks to his theatrical friends was: "If an actor wants to have his innings on the stage he must look out for his outings."

Almost all of the leading performers of today have schedules of daily outdoor exercise mapped out to which they adhere closely, even during the height of the winter theatrical season. William Gillette, to overcome his chronic nervousness, walks five miles every afternoon. On matinee days he indulges in his walk after a late breakfast. Miss Frances Starr and Miss Blanche Bates take daily horseback rides. John Drew plays "squash." James K. Hackett, who possessed considerable lacrosse prowess while at college, pulls weights in a gymnasium; Robert Edson, known in the profession as the "muscle mad" actor, drives an automobile at least twenty miles a day; and E. H. Sothern spends an hour with the foils.

Frank McIntyre spends an hour and a half daily in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium; H. B. Warner boxes at the New York Athletic club and follows it up with a swim in the tank; Robert Mantell does "setting-up exercises" out of doors for half an hour; and William Faversham has recently forsaken his bicycle for driving.

Miss Maude Adams rides a horse to keep herself in physical trim. Madame Alla Nazimova and Miss Julia Marlowe allow themselves two hours a day for play in the open air. Henry Miller personally looks after his farm, "Sky Meadows," near Stamford, Conn., whence he commutes to the theater four out of the six theater days when he is playing in New York. While on the road, he takes short jogs in the country. Miss Mabel Taliaferro, while playing in the east, spends much of her day time on her husband's yacht, and Miss Gertrude Coghlan alternates between long motor rides and golfing.

George M. Cohan, it is interesting to note, has composed a number of his lyrics while taking automobile rides to Manhattan Beach. Miss Louise Gunning rides cross country in New Rochelle. Miss Billie Burke spends every available minute in her touring automobile. Each one of the leading players, in fact, does something daily during the playing season to better his or her physical condition.—The Outing Magazine.

A CHINESE FAIRY TALE.

A delightful Chinese fairy tale by Su Sin Far is told in the House-keeper.

"Why do we never see the fairies?" asked Mermel.

"Because," replied her mother, "the fairies do not wish to be seen."

"But why, honorable mother, do they not wish to be seen?"

"Would my jade jewel wish to show herself to strangers if she wore no tunic or shoes or rosettes?"

Mermel glanced down at her blue silk tunic embroidered in white and gold to her scarlet shoes beaded at the tips so as to resemble the heads of kittens, and looking over to a mirror hung on the side of the wall where the sun shone, noted the purple rosettes in her hair and the bright butterfly's wing.

"Oh, no! honorable mother," said she shaking her head with quite a shocked air.

"Then when you hear the reason why the fairies do not appear to you except in your dreams, you will know that they are doing just as you would do were you in a fairy's shoes."

"A story! A story!" cried Mermel, clapping her hands and waving her fan, and Choy and Fei and Wei and Su, who were playing battledore and shuttlecock on the green, ran into the house and grouped themselves around Mermel and the mother. They all loved stories.

"Many, many years ago," began the mother of Mermel, "when the sun was a warm hearted but mischievous boy, playing all kinds of pranks with fruit and flowers and growing things, and his sister, the Moon, was too young to be sad and serious, the fairies met together by night. The sun, of course, was not present, and the moon had withdrawn behind a cloud. Stars alone shone in the quiet sky. By their light the fairies looked upon each other, and found themselves so fair and radiant in their robes of varied hues, all wonderfully fashioned, fringed and laced, some bright and brilliant, others, delicate and gauzy, but each and all a perfect dream of loveliness, that they danced for very joy in themselves and the garments in which they were arrayed.

"The dance being over, the Queen of all sighed a fragrant sigh of happiness upon the air, and bowing to her lovely companions, said:

"Sweet sisters, the mission of the fairies is to gladden the hearts of the mortals. Let us, therefore, this night, leave behind us on the earth the exquisite garments whose hues and fashions have given us so much pleasure. And because we may not be seen uncovered, let us from hence forth be invisible."

"We will! We will!" cried the sister fairies. They were all good and kind of heart, and much as they loved their dainty robes, they loved better to give happiness to others.

"And that is why the fairies are invisible, and why we have the flowers."

"The flowers!" cried Mermel. "Why the flowers?"

"And the fairies' garments! Where can we find them?" asked Fei with the starry eyes.

"In the gardens, in the forests and by the streams," answered the mother. "The flowers, dear children, are the bright hued garments which the fairies left behind them when they flew from earth, never to return again, save invisible."

On His Job.

Railroad men are telling this incident as having occurred on a Kansas train some time ago. The rails spread and the engine, tender and baggage car left the track, but the jar was not hard enough to disturb the sleepers in the rear Pullmans. In the last Pullman the porter was shining shoes and thinking that the train was stopping at an unusual place, he went ahead to see about the difficulty. He was told that within a couple of hours the engine could be put back and the track repaired. So he got busy with his shoes again.

Suddenly a head popped out of one of the berths and a man shouted: "Say, porter, what are we stopping here for?"

"Oh," answered the porter, "we had a wreck."

"A wreck? Wow! Oh-oh-oh-wow! My neck! My neck! My chest! My back! Oh-oh-oh!"—Kansas City Journal.

Didn't Know the Slang.

An English woman who not long ago moved to Kansas City, Kan., met a friend on the street the other day, says the Times, and startled her by asking: "Do you know where I could find a joint?"

"A joint?" gasped the friend. "What on earth do you want to find a joint for?"

"Why, just a natural craving. I've been looking all over town for one."

Why?

From a small beginning the sale and use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. Why? Because it has proved especially valuable for coughs and colds. For sale by all dealers.

INFLUENCE OF TIDE ON FISHING.

The most essential thing in sea fishing, next to tackle and bait, is a tide table, because all marine fishes except the flatfish—flounder and fluke—are captured more readily at a certain tide. The main cause for such is, that fish are more active in their search for food, generally on the flood tide.

Vast schools of little fishes move close into shore on the incoming tide, working their way into the smaller bays and inlets, especially near the edge of banks, where they feed on the small crustaceans, shrimps and little minnows that are effectively hide from their larger enemies when the tide is low and the large fish are unable to get at them in very shoal water.

It is a common and interesting sight to see a school of weakfish slowly moving in near the surface with the early tide. Suddenly one sees the smooth surface all in commotion, minnows and silvery spearing leap frantically in all directions, then instantly disappear to certain death. At such times, anglers should be ready with their boat trimmed snug, lins out floating 40 feet away baited with live shrimps.

Tide affects bottom feeders, though not to such a large extent. Fishing from piers and docks just an hour before and after flood is most likely to give good results. On wrecks, much depends on the kind of fish; the last of the ebb and at low tide is considered the worst condition for general fishing. In the open sea on the banks, tidal influence counts for little or nothing; any tide is as good as another. In surf casting, soon after the tide begins to flow in till an hour after it recedes, is invariably the best part of the day for the majority of fishes.—The Outing Magazine.

Where Women First Voted.

The renewed agitation for equal suffrage recalls the almost forgotten fact that in New Jersey was first extended to women the right of suffrage on the same terms as to men.

On the second day of July, 1776, (two days before the signing of the Declaration of Independence), the first constitutional convention of New Jersey, in session at Burlington for the purpose of revising the old Colonial charter, struck out of the suffrage clause the words "male freeholders" and inserted the words "all inhabitants." It then read "All inhabitants worth £50."

On this property qualification women voted "in increasing numbers" until 1807. Only those few women could vote who owned $250 worth of property, and these were almost all Federalists. That party continued to control the state until 1807, when for the first time the democratic party obtained a majority in the legislature. The democrats at once proceeded to disfranchise the white women and free negroes by an act which, it is said, was clearly unconstitutional, but which never was contested. In 1844 a new constitution removed any question on the subject by using the words "white male citizen."—Kansas City Star.

Ducks as Gold Miners.

The story of the goose that laid the golden egg is a minor classic, like the lamb with the golden fleece, the bull with the diamond horns, the fishes of the Bahamas that bring up gill loads of finest coral and plead to have the excrescences removed, then gratefully return to their native deeps; birds of paradise that eat rubies and opals to color their feathers, ostriches whose stomachs are filled with the richest gems, which they refuse to digest; oysters and clams from polluted waters opening their mouths to sell pearls, etc. Now comes the plain, old-fashioned puddle duck with a certificate of usefulness, the very first time in his life that he did something better than stand on his head in a mud-puddle and scoop up a living by dredging ooze and infusoria.

Perhaps you did not know that the idea of the steam dredger was suggested by the common duck. Maybe you have forgotten that the original notion of sailing a ship was derived from the flight of a buzzard. Of course, no goose ever lived to lay a golden egg; that was a fairy story. But out in the vicinity of the Lucky Jim mines in Colorado a man has been working for him 40 common puddle ducks. They are kept on short rations till very hungry; then they are turned loose, in care of a duckherd, and allowed to "roost" for a living. The creek is very shallow except in spots, where the pools are inviting. These ducks dive all day, and at night are driven into a barn, where the craws are stripped of all contents. The average gain is about three-eighths of a pound of gold to each crew. As much as three-quarters of a pound was recently taken out of the crew of a big, lusty drake. This beats the goose of the golden egg several miles.—New York Press.

WILL GODFREY'S LAST LEAP.

It was a sultry afternoon in the middle of August. The hot air, which had a slight haze, hung like a transparent curtain of light and heat. The couch on which Will Godfrey had lain ever since his hunting accident in the spring had a view of a flower garden richly decked with scarlet and gold, and beyond it of the sun-scorched park where oaks, elms, and chestnuts spread great branches, clad in the tielless foliage of late summer. The deer were huddled together in the shade; there was little sign of stirring life, all Nature seemed asleep.

The doctor was sitting near Will. His eyes at the present moment were so full of sorrow that he dared not raise them. There had been a consultation that morning with a great London surgeon, and the result was supposed to be favorable—the life might possibly be prolonged under certain conditions.

Will was a man of almost gigantic build. He looked like Goliath laid low. Goliath dying by inches instead of a lion with stroke from his own sword.

"How long will this go on, doctor?" he said, abruptly, looking at his friend with great wistful eyes.

The doctor did not speak for a moment. He raised his eyes, but not to his patient's face; they wandered round the room, the walls of which were full of pictures of hunting scenes.

"How long will this go on?" he repeated, insistently.

"It may be for months—even years. You are suffering from creeping paralysis, but that is often very slow."

"There is no hope for recovery, not even of partial recovery, doctor?"

"God knows I wish there were; that's one of the hardest parts of a doctor's life, the being unable to do more than patch up a magnificent frame like yours."

"There was a rabbit once, half-killed and quivering—we knocked it on the head and put it out of its pain; we didn't leave it in its misery; we didn't feed it up to prolong the anguish. And the very horse which fell with me, whose legs were broken, was shot, that very hour; it wasn't left to linger. Man is less cruel than God. Man understands—God does not."

"Hush," said the doctor gently. He was a man of great reverence of thought and feeling.

Evelyn Godfrey came in at that moment, a beautiful woman with a singularly young, girlish face and an extraordinary expression of vitality. She was pale, with a soft, creamy paleness and had black eyebrows and intensely gray, black-fringed eyes.

She waited till the doctor had gone, and then knelt down by her husband and stroked his hand.

"I was thought an idle man, wasn't I, Lyn?" he said, softly, smiling at her—oh, what a sad smile it was!

"But I made a business of sport and active games; there was no season of the year when time hung heavy on my hands. There was hunting in the winter and early spring, fly fishing in May, grouse shooting in August, partridge and pheasant shooting afterward, and between whistles golf."

"Doesn't it hurt you to talk about it?" said Lyn, with a break in her voice.

"No—it's the only comfort I have. I never knew I had such a strong imagination. I shut my eyes and see the very scenes where I have been so happy—the golf links, the meet at the crossroads, the moors, the covers—but sometimes all the pictures run into on another like a kaleidoscope."

"Shall I read to you?" said Lyn, gently.

"No—talk to me. You're a good woman, Lyn, aren't you?"

"Do you know what I said to the doctor?"

She shook her head.

"I spoke of a rabbit that had been wounded to death, whose condition was hopeless. I said if a man saw that animal he would immediately put it out of its pain; he would be thought a brute if he didn't. The mere brutes are better off than men—they're not allowed to live when existence means torture. And yet the two cases can't be compared for suffering; the brute has a certain amount of physical pain, but that's all; it has no imagination to paint pictures of never-to-be-had again delight, no highly strung nerves to increase its agony tenfold."

"But the mere brute isn't taken care of, nursed tenderly," said Lyn.

"That's only a refinement of cruelty when there's no hope. Little woman," he went on, gravely looking at her with very kind eyes, "you married a strong man fond of sport, full of the joy of living, to whom life meant health and strength and a roaring good time; this cripple lying on a stretcher is really a stranger to you."

"Ah, don't say that," she cried, imploringly, stretching out her hand.

"It must be true. I'm a stranger to myself. I can't imagine myself chained to this stretcher unable to move without pain. It's not Will Godfrey who is lying here—no, Will Godfrey is the man I think about in my dreams, leaping the ditches on a chilly spring morning, or marching over the grouse moors with a gun—not this corpse of a man, dead to everything he loved."

"But am I nothing to you?" sobbed poor Lyn, who felt that her cup of anguish was indeed full.

"I'm not, so to say, a good man," Will went on dreamily. "Churchgoing bored me, and that's the truth. I went because you liked it, darling, and because it was the right thing for the agent at the Mall, example, and all that; but I was profoundly bored—I've nothing to cheer me now."

"It—It might even go on dreaming about this sport; things are decidedly real in a dream, Lyn! I vow last night I saw the meet clear and distinct—the bare trees and the hedges standing out against a yellowish sky—and I was coming up with the rest, tearing, galloping in a mad sort of way—and it was real, Lyn, much more real than this—"

At that moment the two were interrupted by the entrance of Priscilla Stainforth, Will's aunt, his mother's sister. She was a terrible woman, with a genius for administering spiritual consolation to her relations and friends at supreme moments in their lives. With the best of motives, she made herself extremely objectionable, and in times of trouble and difficulty was avoided like the plague. She had called very often for the purpose of seeing Will, but had been refused admission. On the present occasion she entered the bedroom uninvited, and advanced to the couch.

There had been no time to make any preparation for her arrival. The table was strewn with papers of a sporting character, a yellow-backed novel lay on the pillow.

"Will, I could not restrain myself; I was obliged to come," she said, with almost piteous earnestness. "You are my own sister's child. Could I ever forgive myself if I neglected my duty toward you at such a time? You have led a selfish pleasure-seeking life, but it's not too late to seek for mercy."

She paused, and looked at Evelyn. "Where is your Bible?" she said, sorrowfully. "I see sporting papers in profusion, but the one Book which will give your husband comfort. The river of death is very near, Will," she went on solemnly; "it flows at the bottom of the valley. Soon you will be at the margin. I hear the time is prolonged in which to prepare for the crossing. I beseech you, use it well."

"Go away, Aunt Priscilla," said Evelyn, fiercely. "Go away—leave him to me. Will, don't you remember father?"

Will looked at his wife, and his face lighted up.

"He was a good man, a saint upon earth. There's no one could throw a stone at father. I am the youngest and quite different from all the rest, and people said I was fast because I liked hunting and sports of all kinds, and some one spoke to father and said that it was a scandal that an Evangelical clergyman's daughter should care for such things. And father—Evelyn's voice broke—"he took me into his study—I was seventeen then—and he made me tell him just how I felt, and he said I had my grandfather's blood in my veins. (Grandfather had lived in the bush, and that was where father was born.) And father said it would be cruel to stifle all the desires and instincts which were mine by nature, and he saved up and bought me a horse, and, as you know, I used to go to the meets, and it was there I met you, Will."

She paused a moment out of breath, trying to choose the right words for the many thoughts which crowded in.

"I want to try to remember what father said—the very words; they were something like this: He said he could understand because he was my father, and that was why God understood. He knows all about us through and through, and He wishes us to be our best selves, as we are. You are a sportsman and an outdoor man, and He cares for you like that, and He'll make you happy in your own way, not in some one else's way. And you don't want any teaching about some things."

After that Will lay quite still with his eyes half closed. In a few minutes he was fast asleep, breathing regularly like a child. It was evidently a happy slumber. He was dreaming, and the dream was vivid and intensely real. His lips were curved in an almost joyful smile.

After a short interval he began to speak.

"The mare is fresh today, Evelyn," he murmured in his sleep. "This is our first ride together since my accident. Oh, it's good to be well!"

"Yes," she answered, in a low, clear voice, which had the ring of laughter in it. "It's good to be riding together again, you and I, you on the Black Princess and I on Star."

But the radiant look vanished, a shadow crossed her husband's face like the wing of a dark cloud.

His Aunt Priscilla's words were evidently haunting him.

"The river," he murmured, in a distressed tone of voice. "I'm close to it now."

"Leap it!" she cried, suddenly. "You can do it, I'm certain. Why, I could do it, Will!"

Only for an instant did Will hesitate. Then his expression changed to a joyous ecstasy of resolve.

"By Jove! I'll have to try, Lyn," he whispered, still in his sleep.

He raised his head with eager expectancy, his left hand was outstretched, grasping invisible reins.

His pulse gave one tremendous bound. It was the last. His head fell quietly back—his left hand relaxed its hold. His lips still smiled! It was a smile of triumph.

Will Godfrey had leaped!—London Onlooker.

Her Life in Danger

If You Have Catarrh or Weak Lungs Read This Carefully.

"Some five years ago I was taken with a bad attack of bronchitis. I was affected with a bronchial cough and cold. The cough was very bad at night and I would wake up choking and gasping for breath and there seemed to be a terrible stoppage in my throat and tubes.

My throat was tender and irritable and had an aching sensation which was especially bad at times. I doctored and used several different remedies but never received any permanent relief that kept the malady from coming on until I used Hymel. This remedy which to me is certainly infallible, cured me and to it I ascribe the cause of my being alive.

Hymel certainly saved my life and I accord it the credit it deserves. There is nothing too strong for me to say of Hymel."—Mrs. Ada Hopkins, 8 Cutter Ave., Coldwater, Mich.

Hymel pronounced High-o-me is breathed into the lungs through a hard rubber inhaler and this soothing antiseptic air as it passes over the inflamed membrane soothes the inflammation, kills the microbes and cures catarrh.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 16 Plain English, or Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, paper-bound, sent for 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only. Cloth-bound, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A few days ago one of Philadelphia's prominent society women told her butler to tell all visitors that she was not at home.

At night, when enumerating the persons who had called during the day, he mentioned the lady's sister, when his mistress exclaimed: "I told you, man, that I was always at home for my sister! You ought to have shown her in."

Next day the lady went out to make a few calls, and during her absence her sister came to the house. "Is your mistress at home?" she asked the butler.

"Yes, madam," was the reply. The lady went upstairs and looked everywhere for her sister. On coming downstairs she said to the butler: "My sister must have gone out, for I cannot find her."

"Yes, madam, she has gone out; but she told me last night that she was always at home to you."—Philadelphia Record.

The Sun Bath.
Here are some beauty rules prescribed by a famous specialist. "All who desire a clear skin must give the skin an air bath daily. This means to sit with clothes off for an hour a day, with the sun playing upon the body. A warm sun parlor is one of the absolute requisites of this daily skin bath. Give your feet an air bath twice a day. Take off your shoes and stockings and sit with your feet bare, resting them upon an old-fashioned foot warmer or upon a bag of hot sand or even upon a rubber hot water bag. All who desire a nice throat and neck must sit with the throat and neck bare part of the day. The neck of morning dresses should be cut low and to a point and the throat and chin must be sunned and aired. Nothing hurts the flesh of the neck like covering it with starched collars and stiff stocks. Loose clothing is a requisite of the skin bath. In Paris, where a woman simply must be lovely, they are taking a new kind of beauty treatment. Instead of dressing in ordinary everyday clothing, or even in the comfortable negligee, they wear some loose drapery, and thus they give the skin a chance.

The still very prevalent idea that night air is injurious is wrong. The night air is purer than that of the day, particularly in great cities, and therefore, one should always keep at least one window open in the bedroom or the room adjoining so as to assure a sufficient and permanent ventilation. The temperature of living rooms should be between 65 and 68 degrees and the heat should not be too dry, says a physician.

Protecting the Hair.

Short wisps of hair that fan the face look well only in poetry or a good love story. The owner realizes they are a great annoyance and often the perplexing problem of keeping them in place is never solved. If they are not permitted to grow, the accumulation of stray locks will increase rapidly, making more each month. The reason for the hair not growing and more coming each day is due, claims a hair dresser, to the very fact that the ends are burned off or rolled off with the curlers. Naturally, when curling the short hair, the ends are caught in the curler, held longest near the most intense heat and cannot escape injury. To protect the hair ends roll the hair around the curler, making the first roll close to the head, then wrap the length, leaving the ends uncurled. In a few months, if the hair is so treated and not curled too often, the short wisps will show a pleasing increase in length. Pin back the short ends with invisible pins and do not curl them more than is absolutely necessary. If sewing or working and the hair falls over the face, as it has the disagreeable habit of doing, hold back the refractory locks with a wide ribbon tied at the top in a bow.

A Good Headache Remedy.

The following recipe is one that can be recommended as a safe preventive of headache, though not a medicine which will cure a bad case of headache once it is started. It is wisest to cure the cause and not wait for the headache. As most headaches are caused by stomach trouble of one form or another, the remedy is very beneficial. Mix one teaspoonful of Epsom salts with one-half teaspoonful of ginger and one-fourth teaspoonful salt. Take two-thirds of a teaspoonful of the mixture after each meal. The ginger provides the necessary heat to the stomach which assists retarded digestion. Until the stomach is heated to perform its natural functions it leaves one dull and listless until food eaten is digested. The salt is a tonic that assists the other ingredients in their medicinal effects upon the stomach. Persons who are subjected to "splitting" headaches have tried this remedy with wonderful success. When necessary decrease or increase the dose according to needs.

Something You Can Make.

Something convenient for the work basket can be made with a few cheap articles. One of my readers gave me one with a description for making same: Get an empty spool and fill the thread space with beeswax. It will be necessary to slightly heat it to fill the spool evenly and smoothly. Cover one end of the spool with a disc of red or green felt with tiny notches extending a few inches beyond the rim. It should be firmly glued in place. Fill the spool cavity with emery and attach three discs of felt, threaded together with baby ribbon, to the opposite end. This makes the beeswax handy for the thread, emery at hand for rusty needles, and the convenient little felt discs furnish a place for needles, all this in a tiny package. Nice for a present, and useful, too, isn't it?

When Traveling on a Sleeper.

A restless person will be kept awake more by the various noises than the motion of the train. If small pieces of cotton are placed in the ears the noise will be less noticeable and in almost all cases when this has been tried the travelers have been able to sleep peacefully through the night. It is a plan often adopted to keep restless babies asleep.

Make a salve of powdered alum and water and bind on the burn; the pain will immediately cease.

Resolution Was Shattered.

A little boy came home one day from school in a very bad humor. Another boy, Jack Jones, had given him a thrashing, and he wanted revenge.

"Oh," said his mother, "don't think of revenge, Willie. Be kind to Jack. Heap coals of fire on his head. Then he will become your friend."

Willie thought he would try this method. So the next day at recess, just as he was buying a lemon pie for luncheon, Jack appeared and said: "Look here; I licked you yesterday, but I didn't give you enough. Now I'm going to lick you again."

And he planted a hard blow on Willie's little stomach.

Willie gasped, but instead of striking back he extended his pie to Jones.

"Here," he said in a kindly voice, "I'll give you this. I make you a present of it."

Jack, in glad amazement, fell upon the pie greedily, and it had soon disappeared.

"Gosh, it was good!" he said. "What did you give it to me for?"

"Because you struck me," said the heaper of coals.

Instantly Jack hauled off and struck him again. "Now go and get another pie," he said.—Ladies Home Journal.

Could Lose Anything.

A newly elected Senator from the West was on his way to Washington. He was thinking great things, when the conductor came into the car with his characteristic, "Have your tickets ready."

The senator began to fumble in one pocket then another. When the conductor came to him he was still looking for his ticket.

"Did you have it when you got in?" inquired the conductor, somewhat impatiently.

"Of course I did. This isn't my first trip."

"Then you couldn't have lost it?" "Couldn't have lost it?" replied the irate politician. "H— I lost a bass drum once."—Philadelphia Record.

Marketing a New Product.

Mrs. Dexter, from somewhere "down State," was enjoying her first ride in a crowded street car in Chicago. It happened that a health officer, in the performance of his regular duties, was taking a sample of the air in the car.

Mrs. Dexter saw his manipulations, but could not understand them; so she turned to a policeman who was sitting next to her.

"I beg you pardon," she said, "but can you tell me what that man is doing?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the officer. "He's bottling the atmosphere."

"For mercy's sake! Do they can the air and sell it nowadays?"—Youth's Companion.

"THE CLIMAX"—THE ATTRACTION AT ENGLISH'S

None of the old familiar stage tricks are used in "The Climax" by Edward Locke, which is the new dramatic sensation that Joe Weber will offer local theatre-goers at the English's, Indianapolis, the week of September 20th, with matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

It is a natural strong story, straight from the shoulder and convincing. It grips you every minute. Underneath it all is the accompaniment of most exquisite music from the inventive brain of Joseph Carl Breil.

In writing "The Climax" Edward Locke cast aside all stage conventions and founded a new epoch in dramatic authorship. "The Climax" is entirely new of theme, new of construction, new in its ideas. It springs from life and from melody. The former is not the life of the idealist or the iconoclast, but of people we come in contact with in our daily routine of life, real men and real women, behaving and acting as human beings do, and not as fanciful constructs the stage mechanisms.

There is Luigi Golfanti, a poor Italian singing master, a Latin von Barwig, with a mixture of gentleness and irascibility in his nature and his quaint aloofness from the principal things of life.

A second character is Pietro, his son, swarthy, hot-tempered and sometimes a morose young composer. The third whose fate gives the play its propulsive force is Adelina von Hagen, old Luigi Golfanti's pupil from a western town, possessed with golden ambitions to become a great operatic celebrity, and fourth is John Raymond, a young doctor who loves Adelina but hates the life she is preparing to enter.

Each of the four characters plainly show Mr. Locke's thorough and absolute knowledge of the people he has depicted. "The Climax" has all those touches of reality which play on the heart strings of the most blasé.

Two Judges.

A western judge, sitting in chambers, seeing from the piles of papers in the lawyer's hands that the first case was likely to be hotly contested asked:

"What is the amount in question?" "Two dollars," said the plaintiff's counsel.

"I'll pay it," said the judge, handing over the money; "call the next case."

He had not the patience of Sir William Grant, who after listening for two days to the arguments of counsel as to the construction of a certain act, quietly observed when they had done: "That act has been repealed."
